WHO'S ADMIRAL D?

"I have often been asked, "Are you the Admiral?" or "Who is the Admiral?" or "How did you come up with the name 'Admiral D's?'" I was fortunate enough to meet David Trach who I will forever affectionately refer to as "Big D." He was a pioneer in shopping centers, owning multiple centers around the state. The White Bear Shopping Center is still owned by his family to this day. He gave me a lease when no one else would. He mentored me personally and helped me with my financing to grow my small business when the only collateral I had was ambition. Whenever I would complain he would always say the same thing,

"Kid, you don't even know what a bad day is."

I would always respond the same, "Whatever, Dave." It wasn't until his funeral that I understood what he meant. His casket was draped with an American flag. I never even recalled him talking of being in the service. He had more medals than I can remember, but I do remember the mention of multiple medals for heroism and valor, particularly on the beach at Okinawa. Big D was a medic at some of the worst places in the South Pacific during World War II. I cannot even imagine what he and so many others from his generation saw or were forced to endure for our freedom. He was so right -- I have no idea what a bad day is. His son, who now manages all the family's real estate, stopped out shortly before opening. He knew the amount of time and effort that had been spent trying to open. He said to me, "What are you going to call it?" I said, "Admirals." As he turned to leave he gave me the ultimate compliment.

"Big D would be proud of you."
